Bio:

Angie Truitt, J.D., is a Managing Director and Executive Partner at Joseph Chris Partners, where she helps companies and organizations add skilled professionals to their teams and professionals take new career steps in the real estate development and construction industries. Angie also manages the team's social media, web content, branding, internal recruiting, onboarding, hiring, and training efforts, and she has led many internal and external company initiatives.

A practicing commercial litigator in her former life, Angie enjoys working in the affordable housing industry, a niche she has been dedicated to for a decade. Angie's network of affordable housing professionals spans the country, and she was thrilled for the opportunity to connect that network to the wonderful opportunities WAHN offers its members. Angie currently serves as the Board's Vice President of Communications. Angie is a member of the State Bar of Texas and the Texas Affiliation of Affordable Housing Providers. Angie frequents housing conferences nationally and was a recent speaker on the Affordable Housing Talent Pipeline at the Illinois Affordable Housing Forum.

Angie grew up a military brat and has lived all over the country and in Panama. Kansas is home, and she earned her BBA in Marketing from her dad's alma mater, Washburn University, there in 1994. But she's lived in the Houston, Texas, area since 1999 after graduating from Baylor University School of Law. She's got a daughter in college and five rescue pups. Angie loves to travel with her daughter, is an avid Dallas Cowboys and Houston Astros fan (and gets plenty of grief for both) and is writing her first book. She is passionate about all issues related to equality and makes the most amazing banana bread in the world.
